German Colonists in Kentucky.

The London (Ky.) Leader, writing of the colonies that have been planted in Kentucky by reason of the untiring energy of Mr. John R. Proctor, the State Geologist and Commissioner of Immigration, says:

Stonesburg is the name of a German settlement extending from one mile south of London some four miles along the Whitley road, and consisting now of twenty-one families mostly out of Southern Germany—Baden, Alsace—and from Switzerland. Their purpose is the growing of fruits, wines, vegetables, grass and cattle. Nearly all the men are tradesmen, such as lock-smiths, joiners, carpenters, masons, stone cutters, wagon makers, millers, bakers, butchers, tanners, boot and shoe makers, etc. The settlement was begun in the spring of 1882 by Charles Hauser, from Friesburg, Baden. The colonists own, altogether, 1,988 acres of land, mostly improved farms from 30 to 150 acres, for which they paid an average of $8 an acre, mostly cash. They are an energetic, industrious and intelligent people and many of our people would do well to pattern after their thrift. Mr. Hauser has promised to give us in detail at some future time their methods in farming and manner of living and we promise our readers something in the result, as Mr. Hauser is far above the average in point of intelligence and education.

Referring to the above paragraph we ask why we cannot induce such colonists to settle in Lawrence county. The object of these Germans is to raise vegetables, grain, grass and cattle, and to produce wine from such grapes as can be grown in Kentucky. There are thousands of acres of land in this county as well adapted to this business as any in the State, and these lands can be bought cheap. In our opinion colonists can be induced to settle here, and the idea is worth the attention of men of means who wish to do some practical good for the county, and at the same time make money for themselves.

PAIN AND ITS RELIEF.

How the Blues and Megrimms May Be Put to Flight.

Pain being the result of too much blood in a part, as a very general rule, the remedy, in severe and pressing cases, is to apply a mustard plaster near that part, which draws the blood away, as is seen by the reddening of the skin.

The most agonizing pains are often removed by the twinkling of an eye by dipping a bit of cloth (woolen, flannel or cotton) in a mixture of equal parts of sweet oil, chloroform and strong spirits of hartshorn just shaken together and spread over the spot with a handkerchief, wadded in the hand and held over the cloth so as to retain the more volatile ingredients; to be removed the moment the pain ceases.

The safest and most comfortable application in nature for the relief of all pain, especially that arising from inflammation, is a wooden cloth kept very warm, even hot, by the steady addition of hot water, or a stream of warm water, where the painful part admits it. When pain is severe, sharp or trifling, there is inflammation, and arises from there being too much blood in the arteries; if dull and heavy, it is caused from their being too much blood in the veins.

The pain of inflammation gives heat; hence, head-ache with a hot head is from too much blood in the arteries, as there is too much being drawn away by putting the feet in very hot water; this often removes pain in any part of the body above the ankles.

When there is too much blood in the veins of the head there is a dull pain or great depression of spirits and the feet are always cold. It is the excess of blood in the veins of the head or brain which always induces the drowsiness which frequently causes suicide. When this is attempted by cutting the throat the relief is instantaneous and the victim becomes anxious for the life he had just attempted to destroy. Hence, a good out-door walk or a hot bath, a sudden fit of laughing or a terrible burst of passion, by dispersing the blood to the surface from the centers, puts the blues and megrimms to flight also. —*N. LACE AS AN HEIRLOOM.

Frugal Dutch and Belgian Housewives Whose Greatest Treasure Is Lace.

Lace in quantity is never seen in the street in Antwerp, unless it is worn by English or Americans; for no Antwerp lady would wear her rich lace in the street, or allow herself to appear in a cheap imitation. These rules still hold good, though there is less rigidity than formerly, and young girls wear contrasts and their mamma's designs in form and fabric which they would not have dreamed of ten years ago. The domestic and social habits, however, hold good, and are maintained as a matter of pride by the genuine ladies of Antwerp. One of these was only a child and would naturally have inherited a magnificent collection of lace, gathered and inherited by her mother. But she was not inclined to work with the needle and robeled against the necessary conditions imposed, of learning how to mend and actually make lace, so as to be able to keep it in perfect condition. Her mother did not force her, but simply told her that the lace in the case would never be hers, but would be left to some member of the family able and willing to "entertain" and care for it. This threat was sufficient to induce the young lady to fulfill her mother's wishes, and she is now not only the possessor of one of the finest private collections of lace in Antwerp, both modern and antique, but can repair any of it so that it is exactly the same as before. So, the lady recently papered and painted two rooms with her own hands, at a cost of fifteen francs for materials, because business being dull, she did not wish to subject her husband to the cost of a house painter and decorator, who had estimated the work and material at two hundred and twenty-five francs. —Antwerp Cor. Albany Arg.

—A New York paper says: "An old lady of Wilton, Conn., has passed her 100th year. She is bright and sensible, except for a single delusion about her age. She kept the record straight until she became 102, when she insisted that she was 200 years old, though she admitted that the last one hundred years didn't seem nearly as long as the first hundred. Since her last birthday she has called herself 201 years old. The old lady recently said to her grandson: 'I feel sorry for the sexton, because if I do not die soon he will have to ring 100 times.'"

He has been found guilty on twenty counts in the United States Court at Louisville, and if the Judge gives him the extent of the law his sentence will be two hundred and eighty-six years in the penitentiary. And if it had occurred in Eastern Kentucky, how the Blue Grass editors would have damned us with headlines of the most glaring type and the most mendacious character! Let us return thanks.

If the next Legislature can spare time enough from enacting laws declaring certain brooks and creeks are navigable, to pay some attention to general legislation, the honorable body can do much towards preserving the purity of the ballot by passing a law looking to the prevention of bribery. The present statute, which simply takes up so much space in our books is a joke. It requires the evidence of two witnesses, or one witness with strong corroborative testimony, to make a case. In our judgment such a law simply opens wide the avenues leading to bribery and corruption, by saying just how the voter may be bought and both he and the purchaser escape punishment. "Here, Bill, you vote for the Honorable Sam Saphend for Congress, and I'll give you a dollar; but when I give you the money just be careful that nobody sees us, and it will be all right". This is the way the thing is managed, and this is the way the ballot is corrupted, and often the will of the people thwarted. It is not our intention in this short article to preach a sermon on the evils of bribery in securing votes. Nor do we intend to try to convince the managers and wire-pullers that by bribery and corruption they sap the foundation of our liberties as a free people. These truths are self-evident. But we do wish us earnestly as possible, to call the attention of our law makers to the necessity of putting a stop, if possible, to the evil spoken of. One of the worst things connected with the buying of votes is the fact that it makes it impossible for a candidate of limited financial ability to successfully compete with a rich and unscrupulous opponent. The poor man may be infinitely the better man of the two, and, indeed, may be really the choice of the people, but the almighty dollar is potent, and Money buys is elected. This fact alone, aside from the demoralizing influences of the practice, should induce our legislators to stop the work of buying and selling votes. It can be done, but not by the law as it now stands. There is no reason why it should require more to convict for this offense than for any other, unless it be for the reason alluded to—to open a way for the successful accomplishment of the purchase and sale.

The Representative or Senator who introduces and carries through a bill which will effectually stop all bribery in the securing of votes will make for himself an enviable name in his State.

AGENTS WANTED!

We Must Educate.

Subscribers of the Big Sandy News: As you have not heard from me in some time I will attempt to write a few thoughts concerning parents and others. As I am constantly thinking of the bright talented young men of our country, how they are fast becoming enrolled on the list with the careless ones, for Education is on the road to the highest pinacles of fame, and I rejoice to see that great bulwark spread and that from state to state and from continent to continent, like unto a winged eagle, and carry the news and happiness to the benighted millions. There are so many that do not take an interest in the welfare of their children, that parents listen to your bright-eyed boy or girl crying for help as it were, but too late—too late, yes it is too late says one when he is weighed down with years, and his head blossoming for the grave, it is too late to ponder over the past, that was spent in idleness and folly.

Yes, parents, there will be stars erased from your crowns in glory, for your vile treatment toward your children when you had an opportunity to enlighten their young and tender minds, when perhaps if they had been duly cared for they would have stood on the topmost round of life, but in stead of that be cast from society and looked upon as ruffians and perhaps fill a dunkard's grave, and still you will say I can't do without my children's work, or I'm too poor. Parents, that is no excuse whatever. Educate your children, and they will be able to administer unto your wants when you become old and helpless. Heed my warnings, parents, for it is right to educate to your children.

I would be pleased to hear from some of my fellow teachers on this subject.

The Louisville Semi-Weekly Post.

PROSPECTUS.

During the past few months the demand for The Post has greatly increased in the country, its popularity being particularly marked in the interior of Kentucky, Tennessee and Indiana. Some difficulty has been presented, however, because it could not reach remote sections as soon after publication as was desired, owing to the existing regulations that control the movement of mail, while in other sections it has enjoyed advantages over the morning papers in this respect, and we have been enabled to furnish a portion of our subscribers with the latest news from twelve to fifteen hours in advance of our contemporaries. In order to meet the difficulty suggested we have determined to issue a SEMI-WEEKLY edition, which will contain carefully selected news matter, full and accurate reports of the markets and other feature which can not fail to render it attractive and almost indispensable to the farmers, merchants and to the general reader of the interior. We are enabled, too, to furnish this interesting edition to subscribers in any part of the country for only per annum. The cheapness of the SEMI-WEEKLY Post should cause no one to detract from its merits. The day for high-priced newspapers has passed. We have found that the cheaper the paper the more readers it has and the more its columns are sought by advertisers.

Terms invariably in advance.

Driven From Sea to Sea;

Or, JUST A CAMPIN'.

BY C. C. FOOT.

PUBLISHED BY PERMISSION OF J. E. DOWNEY & CO., PUBLISHERS, CHICAGO.

And they had good neighbors, which added much to the pleasantness of their surroundings, for though never content to be separate from each other even for a day, our young friends enjoyed having their acquaintances drop in on them, and often visited among their neighbors, spending the evening or Sunday afternoon.

They heard regularly from Larry's parents, and quite frequently from Jennie and her husband, who were still in Chicago and doing well. At least Erastus had steady employment, and they were comfortable and happy.

Mr. and Mrs. Parsons had now fully decided to sell their home on the mountain at the first opportunity, and move to the Slough. Their out-of-the-way location alone operating against the ready sale of the place.

Meghline Erastus and Larry worked on.

The size of orchard and vineyard was increased by the planting of other trees and shrubs. Rose bushes were set out at the corners of the porch and beneath the windows, and evergreens and flowering shrubs in the front yard.

The main irrigating ditch had long been completed the year before, the work of carrying the water wherever needed, by means of small side ditches, was comparatively easy and rapid, so that some pretty broad fields of grain and grass were beginning to stretch away on every side of their cottage.

But now came a terrible rumor.

It was told doubtfully at first, as something that could hardly be possible—that a railroad company laid claim to the lands about the Slough, and would compel payment of their present market value, all improvements included, or evict the homesteaders from possession.

The settlers generally laughed at the tale, as being started by some one for the purpose of giving them a fright.

"What?" they said, "the railroad company claim our lands? Why, the land was absolutely valueless, thought not to be worth paying taxes on, until we irrigated it and built houses and put out orchards and vineyards."

"Besides, the land grant by Congress was made to a company whose charter fixed the line of their road more than a hundred miles away, on the other side of a range of mountains; and even this grant the company has forfeited long ago, the time in which the road was to be built in order to obtain the land having expired two years since, and the road is not built yet."

It seemed absurd for anybody to talk about a railroad company having a claim to their lands, when they had redeemed them from the desert, and were almost ready to prove up on them under the Homestead and Preemption laws.

Yet there were those who were less easily disarmed of fear.

They knew that in Iowa a railroad company had dispossessed settlers who had actually proved up and received deeds to their homes from the Government.

There were those among them, too, who had suffered from the overflow of by-trail eminees, others from the Sisco Ranch, and yet others who had suffered from encroachments of corporations in other States and other portions of this State, and these were prepared to believe that nothing was too preposterous for the railroad company to do. If its officers thought there was the remotest chance of enforcing it, either by fair means or foul.

When Erastus Hemmingway heard the rumor his heart sunk, for he had seen too much of the heartlessness and greed of corporations not to fear the worst, and he at once took steps to ascertain the truth.

He wrote to the headquarters of the company, repeating what he had heard, and asking if there was any truth in the statement that the company professed to have any claim to the land in the vicinity of the Slough.

In reply he received a letter and also a circular.

The letter was signed by the President of the railroad company, and was to the effect that the company hoped to be allowed the original grant of lands made by Congress in aid of the road, but the boundaries of the grant had not been determined, and probably would not be for some time.

Meanwhile, the letter went on to say, the settlers could be assured that in no case should they be the losers, as, if it should eventually be determined that the land which they occupied was within the lands of the grant to the road, the company pledged itself to transfer it to the occupants on payment of the Government price, and attention was called to the accompanying circular, copies of which, the letter said, were being issued and distributed all over the State for the purpose of inducing people to take up land at the Slough. This circular also contained a pledge that if found to be within the grant of Congress to the road, the company would transfer the land to whoever had improved it immediately on payment of the Government price.

This letter, taken in connection with the circulars which were scattered freely among the settlers, if it did not remove all feeling of fear from the minds of Erastus and a few others, did serve to allay the general alarm, which was before on the increase, and improvement was going on as usual.

The circulars of the company sent to other portions of the State had the desired effect, and very soon other families began to come in in considerable numbers, all taking up claims and relying upon the printed pledges of the company that in no case should the land cost more than the price asked by Government for wild lands.

Consequently on.

And now those who came first to the Slough began to turn up abundantly the fruit of their labor and perseverance.

The work of turning a veritable desert into a garden had been accomplished

It had been done, too, without capital, and by men who were forced to support themselves and their families while the transformation was being made.

Orchards and vineyards were loaded with fruit. Oranges and apples, peaches, plums, cherries, pears, pine-apples, lemons, pomeloes, nectarines—all the semi-tropical fruit, and some which grow nowhere else outside of the tropics themselves, were to be found in full bearing upon the irrigated lands of the settlers at Mussel Slough.

Green fields grew broader and greener. Little flocks and herds of cattle and sheep were to be seen feeding on the rich vegetation which came with the water that overspread the land from the system of irrigating ditches; and as the result of all this, new and pretty cottages were taking the place of the wretched huts in which nearly all had been forced to live during the first years of their residence; and it was in the midst of this prosperity, when want had been banished by years of patient, persevering toil, and they were rejoicing over troubles past, and the thought that for the rest of their days they could take life easy, that the stroke came which turned all their joy into mourning, and changed the current of their blood from the peaceful flow of quiet, happy hearts to a seething flood in hearts made hot with fear and hate.

This was no rumor from an unknown source that reached their ears, awaking doubt in some and ridicule in others. It was not the faint murmuring of a distant storm that might never reach them, but the sudden rush of the whirlwind; the flash of the lightning, the falling of the thunderbolt from a sunny sky. It came as a notice from the railroad company to each settler, informing him that he was a trespasser on the lands of the company, and must immediately vacate unless he was prepared to pay the value of the lands occupied by him, which had been carefully appraised, so the notice read, by competent judges, whose estimate of the value of each quarter-section accompanied the notice.

This appraisal ranged from ten to thirty-five dollars per acre; that of Erastus Hemmingway being thirty dollars per acre, or a total of four thousand eight hundred dollars, which he was asked to pay to the railroad company for the land he had redeemed from the desert or failing therein was ordered to at once vacate the premises.

The excitement which the receipt of these notices caused can be imagined.

Torments of vengeance upon the officers of the company were both loud and frequent, and had they been present, there is no question as to what their fate would have been. Death in some form would unquestionably have been meted out to them.

But they were careful not to be present.

They had deliberately laid, and were now executing, a plan to rob these people of their homes, and they were too cunning to come within reach of their victims while the first hot flush of righteous anger was upon them.

With the power which their immense wealth, the gift of Congress, gave them, they did not fear the courts or the State.

They already controlled these, and were prepared to let or threaten, as they deemed most likely to accomplish their end, any official who stood in the way of their plans for wholesale robbery.

The leaders in the plot stood high in social and political circles.

The settlers had small means of making the outrage upon their rights known, and their cause was, indeed, desperate, and it is small wonder, when in every dwelling at the Slough were women whose eyes were red with weeping, that there should be men whose lips uttered curses, and whose muscles twitched with eagerness to lay hands upon the authors of their woe.

Only a few days before the notices to pay or vacate reached the settlers, Erastus and Lucy had received a letter from Mrs. Parsons saying that they had at last found a probable purchaser for their place.

They would know in a few days, she wrote, and if they sold they should pack up and start for the Slough at once, as they did not wish, even if the purchaser of the property would permit, to remain on the mountain through the winter. It would seem more lonely than ever when the place was no longer their own.

The only thing that would delay their coming, if they sold, was Johnny's health.

The boy had not been as well as common the past summer, and had been quite sick recently, but was getting better now, and she thought would be able to be moved, and if they sold she would take him and start at once by boat, leaving Mr. Parsons to drive across with their household goods, as Erastus and Lucy had done.

The reception of this news had caused much pleasure to the young couple, who were both desirous of having their parents near them.

Lucy was especially anxious for the presence of her mother at this time, and hastened to reply, urging that they sell if they could get anything like a fair price, and that they come at once.

But when the determination of the railroad corporation to rob them of their own home became known to them, they felt it would be better for their parents not to sell, at least for the present; and Lucy again wrote, telling her parents of the difficulty they were in, and that if they had not sold, it might be better not to do so.

It was a hard thing to do, and the poor young wife had often to pause and wipe away the tears that blinded her eyes as she wrote of their troubles—thinking, too, of the sorrow it would bring to the hearts of the old people upon the mountain side.

She was expecting to become a mother soon, and all the sweet joy with which she had been looking forward to the coming of the babe had given place to a terrible fear of what the future might have in store for them all.

Erastus had not been loud in his threats, as had others. Indeed he had not threatened at all; but he was not a man of many words. And she had not forgotten how at the Suscol Ranch, when but a boy, he had taken her mother and Mrs. Ritchie with the children, of which she was one, to a place of safety and then returned to defend the cottage with his life. And now the thought kept coming to her: "What if the company should actually attempt the eviction of the settlers and Erastus should again defend their house, and be killed?"

She tried to put the thought from her, but it kept coming back, each time with increasing strength, until it came almost to be a conviction. She knew, or thought she knew, that if efforts were made at an eviction, her husband would call upon his neighbors to defend their homes with their lives, and would set them the example.

It was a horrible thought. But it came and it clung to her; and though she tried hard not to make her letter to her parents be without a gleam of hope, she yet felt when it was written and sealed that she had failed, and was still further depressed by the thought of the effort it would have upon those to whom it was to be sent; and especially upon her father, who she knew would bear the blow even less stoutly than her mother.

At last the verbal sale of the mountain place had been concluded between Mr. and Mrs. Parsons and the gentlemen of whom Mrs. Parsons had written.

They were to receive two thousand dollars cash down and to give immediate possession; and on the morning but one following that of which Lucy's second letter was mailed, John Parsons started to town with the deed made out and signed by his wife.

He was to meet the purchaser at the court-house in Philippsburg, deliver the deed and receive the money, provided the title was found to be clear, of which there was no doubt in the minds of either party; the abstract, which Blake gave to Parsons when he bought the property, having been shown as proof of that fact when negotiations for the purchase and sale were first begun.

The sky looked cloudy and threatening when he left home, but it did not do to fail of being at the appointed place on time, and he kissed his crippled boy and his wife and bid her good sports promising to be home by dark.

On reaching town he put out his horse, saw that he was properly fed, and then started for the court-house.

On his way there he had to pass the post-office, and, stopping to inquire if there was any mail for him, was handed Lucy's letter to her mother.

He recognized the postmark and opened it at once—not a common proceeding with him, for his eyes were no longer good, and even when letters came addressed to himself instead of his wife, he usually preferred to wait until he got home and then have her read them aloud while he ate supper or smoked his pipe and rested.

But now something depressed him with the thought that he had better open the letter. He had a feeling that perhaps all was not right at the Slough.

Perhaps it was because it had been only a few days since they had received a letter from there, and so he not expecting another so soon.

Tearing open the envelope he began to read, but had not proceeded far before his hand trembled so that he could not hold the paper still enough to see the letters, and he folded it up and put it into his pocket.

He had read enough, however, to understand what had befallen his children.

He knew that they were to be driven from their home, as he and they had so often been before, to the mercy of greed of soulless corporations, or combinations of rich men whose hearts had turned to stone beneath the weight of their immense wealth.

For a moment it seemed to him that he should do right there, and those who were looking saw him stagger like a drunken man, but he rallied at once and went out without a word.

The thought that the cottage on the mountain side was still theirs, and would afford an asylum for the children, had come to him, and he was hastening to tell the would-be purchaser that under the circumstances they could not let him have the place.

It was fortunate that the bargain was not closed, he thought. How lucky that he had opened the letter instead of waiting until he got home!

USE Vegetable Stettin HALL'S HAIR RENEWER.

It is a medicinal preparation, and, at the same time, an elegant and cleanly toilet article. Its action upon the scalp is healthful. It nourishes the glands which support the hair, and causes thin, dry hair to become thick, soft, and vigorous. It restores the color of youth to locks which have become faded with age or disease; and relieves and cures itching, caused by humors of the scalp. Dr. George Gray, Nashua, N. H., writes: "It gives me pleasure to testify to the wonderful effects produced by Hall's Vegetable Stettin Hair Renewer, as observed by me in very many cases. IT WILL CERTAINLY RESTORE THE HAIR TO ITS ORIGINAL COLOR. It cleanses the head of dandruff, and leaves the hair soft, glossy, and beautiful." F. T. Southorn, 1010 Spruce st., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "After unavailingly trying a number of preparations to prevent my hair from falling out, and, realizing that I was fast becoming bald, I tried, as a last resort, Hall's Hair Renewer. I have used only four bottles of the Renewer, and am perfectly satisfied that it is the best preparation in the market for checking the falling out of hair, invigorating the hair roots, and promoting a new growth."

Buckingham's Dye

commends itself to all who have occasion to use a dye for the beard or mustache. It will change gray, faded, or sandy whiskers, to a beautiful brown or black, as desired. The colors produced are natural and lasting. It cannot be washed off, contains no destructive ingredients, is cheap, safe, convenient to use, and effectual.

A Young Gentleman's Wailest.

Three or four weeks ago the very youthful son of a millionaire manufacturer, whose wife is struggling hard to get into what are considered the inner social circles, got a k from a three months residence in London. He lounged about the clubs and the hotels in which the representatives of wealth and fashion gather in a sort of amazing colors, the caparison of which was his waistcoat. And the latter garment was always flying loose and unbuttoned at the bottom. Naturally every one intimate enough to talk familiarly to the young gentleman would in the course of the conversation mechanically close the button and the ex-plate would surely unfasten it again, so that no one ever saw the waistcoat closed all the way down for more than a minute and a half at a time. After this performance had gone on for a week or two the young gentleman's friend who was about to marry in London.

"Look here, old chap, don't do that."
"Don't do what, dear boy?"
"Don't close that lower button. To leave the last button of your waistcoat open is really a very interesting thing, don't you know? That is really what I saw you know, at all the races over in England. I have a real eye for detail, don't you know? Very gentlemanly must who wears his dress properly."

The seed was planted on good ground and now all the university exquisites wear their waistcoats buttoned open at the bottom. For use the fashion is dead in London. Some said "Lord undergrads" as supported it during the last season, and a few of them took it up after they returned to form one of them probably outwitted got it.

Having returned to England from the seat of war, "the soldier" all the first excitement and on one of the German embassies, to whom he urged the knowledge of the disposition of the German troops, arranged in weaving round and that environment of blood and iron, he resolved to make no more effort to pace his services. It was a toss up as to when the great celebration should be applied to, but to quote, "The Daily News" was the first and Dr. Forbes found himself appreciated. The oblation, of The News, met him pleasantly, and, after listening to what he had to say, remarked "that is a really very interesting and valuable. Will you oblige me by writing three columns on the subject, and will you consider a guinea a column adequate remuneration? If so, please let the copy be sent in as rapidly as possible." Having returned to his lodgings and begun to write Mr. Forbes found that he had more than three columns of matter to say, and went back to explain the difficulty. He saw the managing editor this time, and the following brief dialogue followed.

"Is this your son?" he trenchantly asked laying his finger on the ellip of proof before him.

Forbes glanced at it and said it was his son.

"Well, then, said he, 'we'll take as much of this of you, as you care to write.'"

The next day Forbes started for Metz to represent The Daily News. "It was then," he says "that in reality my career as a war correspondent began."

boon ever bestowed upon man is perfect health, and the true way to insure health is to purify your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Mrs. Eliza A. Clough, 31 Arlington st., Lowell, Mass., writes: "Every winter and spring my family, including myself, use several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Experience has convinced me that, as a powerful purifier, it is very much superior to any other preparation of Sarsaparilla. All persons of scrofulous or consumptive tendencies, and especially delicate children, are sure to be greatly benefited by its use." J. W. Starr, Laconia, Iowa, writes: "For years I was troubled with scrofulous complaints. I tried several different preparations, which did me little, if any, good. Two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla effected a complete cure. It is my opinion that this medicine is the best blood of the day." C. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H., writes: "For a number of years I was troubled with a humor in my eyes, and unable to obtain relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I have taken several bottles, am greatly benefited, and believe it to be the best of blood purifiers." R. Harris, Creel City, Ramsey Co., Dakota, writes: "I have been an intense sufferer, with Dyspepsia, for the past three years. Six months ago I began to use

It has effected an entire cure, and I am now as well as ever."
